China, Africa, and Debt Distress: Fact and Fiction about Asset Seizures

Thursday, June 25, 2020 – 9:30am EDT

Deborah BRAUTIGAM

Deborah Brautigam is the Bernard L. Schwartz Professor of International Political Economy and founding director of the China Africa Research Initiative (CARI) at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). She has been writing about the fact and fiction of China and Africa; state-building; governance and foreign aid for more than 30 years. She is the author of 3 books on China in Africa, including The Dragon's Gift: The Real Story of China in Africa. Her current research focuses on Chinese lending in risky overseas markets.

Won KIDANE

Won Kidane is a Fulbright Scholar and a tenured Associate Professor of Law at the Seattle University School of Law. He teaches and writes in the areas of international arbitration and litigation, international and comparative law, international investment law, and a clinical course, among others. Professor Kidane has published a comprehensive book on dispute settlement in China-Africa economic relations focusing on investment and commercial arbitration. His latest book, The Culture of International Arbitration, was released in March 2017 by Oxford University Press. Before teaching, Professor Kidane practiced law in Washington DC; he continues to represent African States in high stakes international investment and commercial arbitration matters. He holds an SJD from Georgetown, a JD from the University of Illinois, an LL.M from the University of Georgia, and an LL.B from Addis Ababa University. He is admitted to practice law in the District of Columbia, Washington State, and Illinois.

Meg RITHMIRE

Meg Rithmire is F. Warren MacFarlan associate professor in the Business, Government, and International Economy Unit. Professor Rithmire holds a PhD in Government from Harvard University, and her primary expertise is in the comparative political economy of development with a focus on China and Asia. Her first book, Land Bargains and Chinese Capitalism (Cambridge University Press, 2015), examines the role of land politics, urban governments, and local property rights regimes in the Chinese economic reforms. A set of new projects investigates the relationship between capital, the state, and globalization in Asia, especially China and Southeast Asia. Prof. Rithmire has conducted fieldwork in China, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, and Sri Lanka.
